What is a CT Scan?

CT scanning—sometimes called CAT scanning—is a non-invasive, painless medical test that helps physicians diagnose and treat medical conditions.

CT imaging uses special X-ray equipment to produce multiple images or pictures of the inside of the body and a computer to join them together in cross-sectional views of the area being studied. The images can then be examined on a computer monitor or printed.

CT scans of internal organs, bone, soft tissues and blood vessels provide greater clarity than conventional X-ray exams.

Exam requires the injection of a contrast medium (iodine) in a vein. A CT scan usually takes approximately 45 minutes.

Preparation:

Do not eat or drink for 4 hours prior to exam. Take Beta Blockers per ordering physician. Discontinue male enhancement medication 4 days prior to exam.

There are no special routines after the CT scan. You will be able to eat after the scan unless your doctor has indicated otherwise. The results of the scan will be sent to your doctor.

NOTE: If you are having an IV contrast for your CT exam, a lab blood test called serum creatinine is usually required if you are over 50, diabetic, or have high blood pressure. Check with your doctor's nurse. The blood test must be done within one month of the scan. It may be done on the same day of your exam.
